

Bunting expands European sales and manufacturing teams

Bunting Magnetics Co headquartered in Newton, KS, has announced the addition of Simon Ayling as production manager and Steve Lacy as technical sales executive to its European manufacturing and sales operational centre based in Berkhamsted, UK. This location, which is responsible for all sales in the UK, Europe and Africa, has recently begun to manufacture equipment which is part of Bunting's magnetic separation product line. "Since the establishment of our new location in Europe, the level of sales activity has increased rapidly," said Robert J Bunting, the company's owner and CEO.

Ayling has spent the past 10 years working for the company's Magnetic Applications Ltd subsidiary in a variety of roles including production manager, planning and resource manager and supply chain manager. Lacy will concentrate initially on serving as the main inside sales contact and will assist export sales manager Gareth Meese in researching and securing new business throughout the region. He will be instrumental in managing Bunting's regional network of distributors and coordinating any customer visits.

www.buntingmagnetics.com

Simon Ayling (left) and Steve Lacy