

New CEO for Intensiv-Filter

Frank Schimmelmann, 45, has been appointed CEO of Intensiv-Filter, the specialist manufacturer of dedusting equipment based in Velbert-Langenberg, Germany. He had previously worked for a competitive manufacturer of dust control equipment, Herding GmbH Filbertechnik located in Amberg, where he had held the position of managing director and had previously helped set up a US subsidiary company for Herding.

Commenting on the appointment, managing partner of Intensiv-Filter Thomas Blüggel said: "I am looking forward to the cooperation with Frank Schimmelmann. We will profit from his extensive technology and market knowledge." The Intensiv-Filter Group includes Infastaub and Solidux, manufacturers of series-produced small filters and dust collectors. It has more than 400 employees worldwide and has been in the forefront of dedusting technology and product recovery for more than 85 years.
